

Frankfort Bank Robbed of $1114

3 Bandits Terrorize Lone Girl Clerk In Bullet Proof Cage and Slug Her When Admitted

For the third time within a few years the Frankfort State Bank was held up and robbed by three bandits Tuesday morning.

Cashier John Lühring had opened the bank and about 9:15 o'clock he went home, leaving the bank clerk, Miss Bernice Weichbrodt alone in the bank. Shortly after Mr. Lühring left the bank, three men came into the bank. Two of them were slim, thin appearing while the third man was short. The latter remained at the street door of the bank while the two slim fellows walked up to the cashier's window and terrorized Miss Weichbrodt by pointing a gun thru the small opening under the glass of the cashier's window. Altho the bank is fully protected with bullet proof glass and a siren, Miss Weichbrodt was so frightened that she obeyed the bandits commands to open the door leading into the cage of the cashier. As she opened the door one of the bandits struck her on the head with the butt of his revolver, knocking her unconscious. The bandits scooped up $1114.03 in cash and walked away. Miss Weichbrodt came to in ten minutes and then telephoned Mr. Lühring what had happened. It so occurred that no one was on the street near the bank and no one saw what happened nor saw the men leaving the bank so the bandits made an easy get away.

The money stolen is insured.

Miss Weichbrodt described the men as of swarthy complexion and the Will County authorities are inclined to believe that they may be a part of the Chicago Heights gang which has been terrorizing southeast Will County for months.

A blue colored Cadillac car with three men in it was seen on the streets of Frankfort about 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, but no one paid any particular attention to it. Photographs were taken of finger prints found on the glass of the cashier's cage of the Frankfort bank, with the hopes that they may serve as a clue.

The first time the Frankfort State bank was held up about $3300 were stolen and Mr. Lühring the cashier, was taken for a ride and later released. After this holdup the bank was equipped with bullet proof glass and when the second holdup was attempted, Mr. Lühring shot it out with the bandits who were later captured and are now serving time. In the second holdup no money was taken.

During the second holdup the robbers fired point blank at the bullet proof glass of the cashier's cage, but the bullets were flattened out when they hit the glass and no damage was done.

All Dirt Streets In Mokena to Be Given A Stone Dressing

At a special meeting of the village board of Mokena held Monday evening of this week, it was voted to top dress with stone every dirt road inside the village limits. Many of the streets to be improved have not had a shovel of gravel on them since they were first laid out.

It was voted to improve the roads in the following order: Third street, Cross street, Union street, Carpenter street, First street.

When grading work was begun on Tuesday morning, work was begun on First street instead of Third street. It was stated that the reason for switching these streets about was that Third street is too muddy to permit grading.

Stone has already arrived for this improvement work.

Wm. Funk New President of the Bremen State Bank

The Bremen State Bank at Tinley Park has elected the following officers:

Wm. Funk, President
H. C. Vogt, Vice-President
J. C. Funk, Secretary
John C. Andres, Cashier
Mrs. Elizabeth Hardinger, Assistant cashier.

Mr. Funk, former mayor of Tinley Park, was elected to fill the vacancy left by the death of Fred Henke, former president of the Bremen State Bank a year ago.

Orland Forbids Roller Skating

The Orland Park Village Board at their meeting Monday night voted to prohibit all roller skating on the concrete highways within the village limits as a means of protecting the children of the village from injury or death and also for the protection of auto drivers. Notices to this effect were posted Tuesday morning by Mrs. H. Adele Cooper, the village clerk.

Reappointment of Mokena Postmaster Being Advocated

A petition has been circulated this week in Mokena by Otto Bartels, cashier of the Mokena State Bank petitioning precinct committeeman, Christ Kohl of the Democratic party to disregard party affiliations and recommend the re-appointment of Mrs. Daisy Lynk as postmistress of Mokena. She is a Republican. Her commission expired last spring, but as the officials in the Republican party whose duty it was to take care of these appointments were too busy playing politics and using the postmasters as a means of getting votes, the re-appointments were not made and as a result six Will County postmasters will have to make room for Democratic appointees.

Mrs. Lynk has rendered excellent service during her tenure of office and it is felt that the interests of the village would best be served by her re-appointment. It is understood that there are ten Democratic aspirants in the field for the Mokena postmastership.

It is not right that politics should dominate the appointments of postmasters. They should be controlled by civil service only. As it now appears the examinations taken for most of the public offices are a farce as political pull means more than how good a rating one taking such examinations receives.

Celebrate Golden Wedding Day

The golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kott former residents of Tinley Park and Orland was celebrated on January 21st in the Lutheran auditorium in Blue Island. At 6:30 a lovely supper was served to about 150 people. Rev. Mr. Reinke of the Lutheran church delivered a short sermon. There were a number of other features on the program, consisting of speaking and singing, also a piano solo by Mrs. H. Liehr, a daughter of the honored couple. Their grand children also sang a few songs which were beautiful.

Mr. and Mrs. Kott once lived on 159th street near the Bachelors Grove church north of Tinley Park. They sold the farm and moved to Orland where they lived until about 12 years ago when they moved to Blue Island to be near their children. About four years ago they moved on a farm again with their daughter, Mrs. Harvey Liehr at Three Rivers, Michigan and are enjoying the farm very much.

Everyone had a fine time. The tables were cleared away after supper and dancing and singing was enjoyed until a late hour. In departing for their homes, the guests wished the couple many happy days of their wedded life.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kott have two other daughters, at Blue Island, Mrs. Ed. Knutson and Mrs. Willie Schmaderke and nine grandchildren, who all took a great interest in the golden anniversary. Mrs. Kott is a sister of John Schultz who celebrated his golden wedding in December. She is also a sister of Henry Schultz of Blue Island and of Mrs. George of Tinley Park.

Viscious Dogs in Orland to be Shot

The dog question took up some of the time of the Orland Park village board Monday night. Complaints have been lodged with the board that a dog belonging to the Rahn family is vicious and has attacked a number of children and persons. Mr. Rahn was notified by the village clerk some time ago to take care of the dog, but the dog is still running loose. If the owners of vicious dogs in the village do not take care of them they will be shot.

Orland Boy Breaks Arm Roller Skating

While George Vogt was roller skating on 143rd street in Orland Park Monday afternoon, he suffered a broken arm when a wheel came off of one of the skates while he was trying to get out of the way of an approaching car.

Frankfort Has Mustache Club

A novel club known as "The Mustache Club" has been formed in Frankfort. The object of the Club is to see who can grow the biggest mustache. Any member who has his mustache shaved off is fined 25 cents.

Tinley to Install Radio Police Alarm System

Ever on the alert for opportunities to advance its community interests, Tinley Park has taken a very modern and forward step in providing a new and quick method of police protection for the business men and citizens of that village by the proposed installation of a radio police alarm system.

This new system will be connected with the business places of the town which in turn will be equipped with certain attachments which in case of a holdup or other trouble, will set the radio alarm system in operation. The police car of the village police chief will be equipped with a system which will receive the alarm. Each business place will be assigned a number of rings on a bell and when the gong starts ringing in the officer's car he can tell where the call is coming from by looking at a chart in the car which will show the number of rings each business place has assigned to it and he can immediately respond to the call and bring aid.

In the case of private residents, the alarm is telephoned to the local telephone exchange which will also be equipped with a radio alarm but which will have a different ring than those of the business places. When the police officer picks up the telephone office call he immediately gets in touch with the office and finds out where the trouble is.

The police officer's home will be similarly equipped so he can be reached at any time day or night. No one outside of the police or the village officials will be able to pick up these radio alarm calls. The alarm is swift and sure and yet cannot be detected by anyone outside of the official circle of the village.

This modern system was discussed at a recent meeting held at the Tinley Park Lions Club headquarters to which the Lions had invited the Tinley Park Business Men's Association and also the inventor of this system, James D. Durkee who gave an address outlining the merits of the invention. The business men were quick to realize the value and importance of the system and immediately made arrangements with Mr. Durkee to install same.

Mr. Durkee is the managing engineer in charge of the American Radio News broadcasting station at Tinley Park. From 1927 to 1928 he was officer in charge at Radio Central, Navy Department, Washington, D. C. Radio Central is the heart of the Naval Communication Service. While at this station Mr. Durkee planned and supervised the communications from Washington to the U. S. S. Utah carrying President Hoover back from his Good-Will tour of South America. Mr. Durkee resigned from the navy in May 1929 to become Chief Communication Engineer with the Universal Wireless Communication Company, whose central traffic offices he designed and whose communication he layed out.

He also was the first to get across the Pacific ocean on short waves.

He is a member of the Institute of Radio Engineers and the Veteran Wireless Operators Association.

The radio police alarm system is to be in operation in Tinley Park in a very short time. This will be the first town in this section to be protected with this type of modern police alarm system.

Tinley Park Legion Post

Frank Hoar, Publicity Chairman

Because of unfavorable comments directed towards our organization of late, I take the liberty of bringing before our friends and neighbors some facts concerning the American Legion.

A notorious gangster was accorded a military funeral by a Chicago Legion Post recently and immediately a storm of protest arose all over the State. The officers of this post have been ordered to appear before our district and county headquarters to explain their reprehensible conduct in honoring a man who had not the slightest conception of honor.

The first steps towards forming the Legion was taken at a caucus at Paris, France, in March, 1919. Emerging from the chaos and horrors of war, a group of far sighted battle scarred veterans, the pioneers of our organization, realized the enormity of the task our government faced in caring for the thousands upon thousands of sick and wounded. Sensing that adjustment through governmental procedure would be necessarily slow, on account of the proverbial red tape, these men pledged themselves to do their utmost to aid their disabled comrades, thus was formed an organization which now numbers over a million members, the American Legion. While the Legion's first concern is, and should be, for their disabled buddies, many other activities are also participated in, such as Child Welfare, Americanism and other projects too numerous to mention at this time.

Today the country is heavily burdened with excessive taxation both federal and local. A good deal of insidious propaganda has been broadcast throughout the country regarding the vast sums expended upon veterans relief. These appropriations are needed to care for veterans, not only of the World War, but of all the other wars our country has been engaged in.

An organization which calls itself the National Economy League is making an intensive drive against appropriations for veterans administration, which they intimate will bankrupt the federal treasury. If such is the case why did federal costs decrease over a billion dollars in the period from 1921 to 1930 while our local, county, and state taxes increased tremendously during that same era. Bear in mind that the taxes you pay upon your property, business, home or farm does not go towards this appropriation for veterans relief, as the money for this purpose is largely derived from the income tax. If we are fortunate enough to be in such circumstances as to pay income tax we should not begrudge the disabled vet a comfortable hospital bed. The National Economy League which would have you believe it is acting solely from altruistic and patriotic motives are concealing a dirty in the woodpile. The leaders of this league are for the most part wealthy—have to pay income tax—and there's where the shoe pinches. They would like to repeal the income tax law. If this group is really sincere about reducing governmental expenditures let them start in Washington. The national capitol is so honeycombed with useless and over lapping bureaus and commissions which are fostered by avaricious politicians of the pork barrel type that it seems here would be a fertile field to start making reductions of a most drastic sort.

Continental Oil Co., Expresses Confidence In Business of 1933

Ponca City, Okla., Jan. 24—Accepted as an expression of confidence in the business outlook for 1933 was announcement made here today by Continental Oil Company of the approval of the largest advertising budget in the company's history, coincident with the release of an advertising campaign announcing a $10,000 prize contest in connection with the introduction of Conoco's new bronze high test gasoline.

"Not only will the 1933 advertising budget be the largest in the company's history," said President Dan Moran, "but the major portion of the appropriation will be devoted to the purchase of newspaper space." The $10,000 prize contest, which is being announced today in newspaper advertising thruout the country, offers $5,000 as a grand prize for the best name for Conoco's new bronze gasoline and $5,000 in 74 cash prizes for the best slogans describing the merits of the new high test gasoline. The contest, opening today, will close February 26.

Courtesy Pays Big Dividends

That courtesy on the part of officers of a village pays big dividends to a community has been manifested in an interesting story which just has come to light in Tinley Park. About a year ago a man from Chicago drove thru Tinley one night and did not know that the lights on his car were out. Officer Harry Utse saw this and followed the man and asked him to pull over on the side of the street. The driver of course had visions of being handed a ticket and asked to appear in court. He was most pleasantly surprised, however, when Officer Utse politely told him his car lights were out and cautioned him against continuing on his way in order to avoid a mishap on the highway. The lights were put in working order and recently the man bought a home in the Elmore subdivision in Tinley, saying he liked to locate in a town of "square shooters." Courtesy pays good dividends.

Orland Barber Hurt In Auto Accident

Jake Ruzies, of Chicago Ridge who runs a barber shop in Orland Park, figured in a serious auto accident last Saturday morning when unable to see on account of the heavy fog he ran his car off the pavement in turning on 143rd street from Harlem avenue. The car turned over but luckily Mr. Ruzies was not pinned in. He managed to get the door open and crawled out and shut off the motor which kept on running after the car upset. He suffered cuts in the face and on the head.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson,
Illinois Press Association

Taking control of the legislative branch of the state government for the first time in 40 years, the Democratic party organized the Fifty-eighth general assembly at its initial meeting with Representative Arthur Roe, Vandalia, as speaker of the house and Senator Richey V. Graham, Cicero, as president pro tem of the senate. Not since 1893 have the Democrats had a majority over the Republicans in both branches of the legislature. The senate now consists of 33 Democrats and 18 Republicans while the house is composed of 80 Democrats and 73 Republicans.

In his farewell address to the general assembly, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson urged constructive revision of the state's revenue system. He cited his own efforts to modernize the system and his inability to accomplish results because of the lack of support of organizations that should have aided him but which now seem to be convinced that it is the logical remedy for adequate tax relief. Governor Emmerson retires from office after 16 years in public life, 12 as secretary of state and four as governor.

Prohibition repeal and economy in all branches of government, state, city and county, were featured in bills which were tossed into the legislative hopper as the Fifty-eighth general assembly convened for its first session. Bills for the repeal of the search and seizure and prohibition acts were offered by Senator Harold Ward, Chicago. Most of the bills to cut the cost of government came from Senator Charles Thompson, Harrisburg, and are similar to measures which went down to defeat in one of the special sessions.

Fifty bills which are urged by the Illinois judicial advisory commission have been introduced in the current session of the general assembly by Senator James J. Barber, Chicago. They have to do with court reform and have the endorsement of the commission. Similar bills were considered at the last regular session.

The task of placing markers along the new Lincoln Memorial highway to designate the route traveled by Abraham Lincoln from Kentucky to Illinois is proceeding rapidly, the state highway department has announced. The markers, in black letters on a white background, read: "Lincoln National Memorial Highway."

Sidetracking of two epidemics that threatened to reach state-wide magnitude involving thousands of cases of illness, is the outstanding achievement of the state department of public health during 1932, according to a summary report of Dr. Andy Hall, state health director. Typhoid fever and diphtheria were the two diseases concerned. It was indicated that the state during the past year has been free from epidemics, mortality has been the lowest ever recorded and the demand for preventative medicine has been far greater than in previous years.

The pig crop saved on Illinois farms from June 1 to December 1, 1932, is placed at 2,827,000 head, an increase of 16 per cent over the 2,430,000 pigs saved during this period in 1931. This report is based on an extensive survey made by the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture in co-operation with the rural mail carriers.

Representative H. D. Sparks, Shelbyville, plans to introduce in the current session of the legislature a bill asking state relief for residents of Moweaqua, where 54 miners were entombed in an explosion in a mine the day before Christmas. He probably will ask for $25,000.

A managing committee of six members of the Republican state central committee will direct the future activities of the Republican party in Illinois with the co-operation of local organizations, looking first to next June's judicial elections. The committee appointed by Chairman Franklin J. Stranksy, consists of George W. Schwaner, Springfield; Justus L. Johnson, Aurora; Charles H. Fletcher, Martinton; John H. Searing, Carbondale; William L. Dawson and John F. Tyrrell, Chicago.

The explosion at the Moweaqua coal mine which killed 54 men the day before Christmas, was not due to negligence, John G. Millhouse, state director of mines and minerals, has stated. Millhouse, who was in charge of the rescue efforts of the mine, says that the blast was "just one of those things that happen in the mining industry—one of the hazards of the industry. Nobody is to blame."

Mrs. Martha Farnham Webster, eighty-seven, author of "Seventy-five Significant Years" and other historical volumes, died at her home in Galesburg following a short illness. She was graduated from Knox in the class of 1869 and held an honorary degree from the college, awarded 50 years later.

Mrs. Lloyd Stafford, thirty-four, died in Geneseo after taking a quantity of pills containing a poison. She had been highly nervous since the death of her father about a month ago.

Salaries of faculty and administrative officers of the University of Illinois will be reduced 10 per cent by action of the board of trustees, President Harry Woodburn Chase has announced. The action was taken as a result of the $500,000 reduction in the salaries' item in the proposed legislative budget to be presented to the state assembly this month. All other items in the budget of the university will also be reduced. It may be necessary in order to keep the University of Illinois open to make some further reductions.

The Illinois Commerce commission has ordered a reduction in gas rates for heating homes in 17 towns in southern Illinois, effective January 15. The territory affected is served by the Western Union Gas and Electric company. New rates will apply to house heating gas consumers in Murphysboro, Ava, Benton, Buckner, Carbondale, Carterville, Duquoin, Christopher, Crainville, Energy, Frankfort Heights, Johnson City, West City, and adjacent territory.

Judge Harry G. Miller has issued an injunction at Belleville restraining Illinois highway police from enforcing the provisions of a new law which bars from the highways trucks and trailers with a length of 40 feet or more. The statute, passed at the last regular session of the legislature, became effective January 1. Three trucking companies filed the injunction suit, claiming they would lose $250,000 in contracts if the law should be enforced.

Production of bituminous coal in Illinois has fallen off 48 per cent since 1920, Dr. W. H. Young of the bureau of mines at Washington has announced, and as production fell off, Illinois' imports from other fields more than doubled. He pointed out that Illinois coal fields have had continuous labor troubles since 1918. Each controversy has disrupted mining operations sufficiently to destroy confidence of consumers, it is stated, and many consumers have turned to other states which have a more dependable production.

Under an amendment to the Illinois statutes, effective January 1, trucks operating on improved public highways at a speed greater than ten miles an hour must be equipped with pneumatic tires. Municipal streets are not excepted from this rule, under an interpretation by the legal department of the Chicago Motor club. This amendment was passed by the general assembly in the summer of 1931. Truck operators have been given 18 months in which to adjust their equipment to meet the new regulations.

State Treasurer Edward J. Barrett earned more than $1,550,000 in interest on state funds during his term, all of which was turned back to the treasury. This amount of interest was earned despite the fact that balances were lower and the interest rate was cut by the banks. The treasurer's January 1 report also shows that the total of tax anticipation notes outstanding was $7,810,000. Together with $2,800,000 issued the first week in January, the figure now stands at $10,610,000.

Democratic Presidential electors of Illinois on January 4 cast their 29 votes for President-Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt and Vice President-Elect John N. Garner. The official action was taken at a meeting held in the state house, with Judge John J. Sullivan, Chicago, as chairman and W. H. Hollarich, Spring Valley, as secretary. The electors voted by ballot and the results were tabulated, signed and mailed to Vice President Charles Curtis at Washington.

Illinois is one of four Mid-Western states that have gained recognition for completeness and dispatch in reporting contagious diseases, the state department of public health has been informed. A morbidity registration area has been created by federal health authorities, which purpose is to detect as promptly as possible the outbreak of epidemic diseases that might assume national importance and to promote the work of collecting complete information concerning such diseases.

Martin H. Bickham, originator of the Illinois "earned relief" program, which has been used successfully for two years in Chicago, has asked that it be spread over the entire state and promises that it would take care of 50 per cent of all unemployed family heads. Previous to a scheduled conference with members of the unemployment commission named by Governor-Elect Charles H. Horner, Bickham said that with a $500,000 appropriation from the last federal relief loan 15,000 men had been paid for work instead of idleness during December. Our people are beginning to realize that it will be better to provide work for the relief of the unemployed than to establish a dole system.

The Illinois Association of Agricultural Fairs has changed the date of its 1933 convention to be held in Galesburg from February 1 and 2 to January 23 and 24, because the time originally selected conflicts with the annual meeting of the Illinois State Dairymen's association at Shelbyville.

Fishing in the Mississippi river at Quincy is the best it has been for many a winter. Commercial fishermen are making big hauls and the idle are fishing and fish markets take what they do not consume.

Ticket to Sparta

By EMILY V. SPEARS

WHEN Peggy Burleson's mother found her shamelessly crying over a bunch of dead violets, she decided something must be done.

"But," protested Peggy, when her mother had explained her plan, "I don't want to go to see Aunt Helen. I want to stay right here in Longhope, where Dick is."

In the end Mrs. Burleson won her point. And two weeks later Peggy was comfortably established in her aunt's luxurious New York apartment, leading a gay life.

And of course Peggy had a good time.

Then suddenly, early in the afternoon of her birthday, a week after her visit began, Peggy suddenly decided she couldn't spend another hour in New York. She must get home. The memory of a shiny white box, layers of gleaming, transparent green paper that she had pulled aside a year ago to disclose a bunch of violets from Dick, came to her so vividly, so poignantly, that she felt almost faint from their nearness.

She was going home. She couldn't go back even for an explanation to her aunt's apartment. Her aunt wouldn't understand.

She hailed a taxi and hurried to the station. It wasn't until she opened her purse to pay the taxi man that she saw she had only two or three dollars. She paid him. Then she stopped to consider what to do next. She'd telephone her aunt—leave word with a maid that she'd gone home for the night. She couldn't make explanations. It was too inconsiderate of her to do it, of course.

She'd buy a ticket that would take her as far as possible on her way. Then, if the conductor remembered—he might forget and let her ride a few stations extra, perhaps the whole way—she'd get off the train, wherever he put her off, and perhaps she could walk the rest of the way.

A crazy plan, of course, but to Peggy at the moment it seemed beautiful.

Fortunately a maid's voice answered her telephone call. There was little surprise in the well-trained, "Yes, Miss," but that was all. Peggy had banked on that. Aunt Helen had high-class servants that never batted an eyelid, no matter what happened.

Peggy's eyes blurred as she worked her way to the head of the line for her ticket. She pushed two dollars and a quarter through the grating. "How far will that go toward Longhope?" she asked the ticket salesman. "To Sparta," he answered. "All right, ticket please," said Peggy. And he gave it to her, with fourteen cents change.

She had to wait half an hour for her train. But that was all right. The maid had told her that her aunt was away at a card party and wouldn't be home till five-thirty.

Snow was falling as the train emerged from the tunnel just beyond the station. Small, business-like flakes. But what was snow to Peggy? She saw violets floating through the air. Sparta was a long way from Longhope. But if she couldn't walk the distance in the flaky snow—oh, well, something would happen.

The warmth and regular motion of the train lulled Peggy to sleep.

A firm but gentle tap on the shoulder awakened her an hour or so later. She looked up to find the conductor leaning over her.

"Excuse me, Miss," he said "Where was your ticket to?"

Silently, Peggy produced it.

"We've passed Sparta, Miss. Tomkins is the next stop."

"Oh yes," said Peggy, glad that she had been asleep when the station was called. "I'm sorry, I'll just get off at the next station."

"Twenty-one cents," said the conductor.

"But—" demanded Peggy.

"Can't help it. I called the station. You'll have to pay."

"Pardon me," said a voice behind her, to the conductor. "The young lady wants to go to Longhope. We are together. I have her fare from Sparta the rest of the way."

The conductor grunted a dissatisfied sound as he accepted a ticket from Dick, and looked at him a bit askance as he slid into the seat beside Peggy.

But that didn't matter to Peggy and Dick.

"You see," he explained, as his hand sought and clasped hers, "it's your birthday. I remembered. And I wanted to be with you—I wanted to tell you, to ask you to marry me. I got to your aunt's apartment just after you'd telephoned, and that nice wooden image of a maid was all excited. She told me what you'd said over the telephone—she'd just been thinking of calling a taxi and going to the station to see what was the matter. Seems she knew—well, she knew you and I knew each other. Your old Annie and she are friends—they've corresponded since you came to New York. Anyway—I got to the station a few minutes before the train left and followed you. Sort of lost my nerve, I guess. Seemed funny to take it for granted you'd feel as I do. But you do, don't you, Peggy?"

Dick's rambling talk had been interspersed by little interjections and exclamations from Peggy, quite satisfying and expressive to him. Darkness was gathering thickly outside the windows, the wind was sighing, and big, white flakes were beating against the warm, lighted windows.

Romantic Origin of Package Medicines

Some of the most interesting romances will be found in the march of industry; for back of nearly every product which gains public acceptance is the very human story of somebody's ideal, ambition, ingenuity, enterprise, disappointment, struggle and final achievement.

The privations and hardships which accompanied the early years of the development of package medicines are an important part of the history of our nation. The public seldom appreciates the doubt, the ridicule, the ostracism and the enormous financial risks which were suffered by the early pioneers in medicines. Their faith, determination and pioneering spirit were responsible for developing and bringing to our medicine shelves those well known package medicines which afford economy and convenience, and which are so essential to our everyday lives.

Today we take our family remedies for granted as naturally as we accept the air or sunshine.

Most package medicines were originally prescribed by that beloved individual, the memory of whose self-sacrificing life is most beautiful—the old family physician. Being prescriptions of merit which produced results, they survived. They became much in demand and consequently much prescribed by their originators. Perhaps the demand grew so rapidly that the old doctor found himself unable, with his limited equipment, his modest kit, to fill the need. Often he, sometimes assisted by his kinsmen or friends, prepared to meet the demand by a quantity production, that the meritorious prescriptions might receive the widespread use which their popularity justified. Then came years of toil, hardships, risks, struggles; with life's earnings and life's efforts invested. Eventually the laboratory and the machine entered the picture, and every invention of a modern world was utilized to increase production, perfection and distribution.

Whether an individual package medicine has been on the market for scores of years, or whether it is the more recent product of medical research, a large proportion of package medicines in general are based upon solid scientific knowledge, and deserve the confidence of the public. Proprietary remedies which can ease human suffering, mitigate human distress, or add to human health and physical efficiency, at a price within the reach of the poor man's pocket-book, are indeed worthy adjuncts to American life, as well as American commerce. "They can be safely relied upon," as Lord Bacon expressed it, "to tune the curious harp of man's body."

Dinner Menus of Past and Present

In the yard next door a turkey gobbler paced back and forth, complaining bitterly about our tiresome habit of feasting on holidays. Once he was a luxury which only the affluent could afford, but now he is out of luck, for turkeys cost less than they have in many years. Time was when turkeys feared for their lives only twice a year, but now they're in constant danger because they have slipped from the luxury class.

Back in 1850 Christmas dinner for a well-to-do American family would have consisted of 12 meat courses and only a couple of vegetables. Today the idea makes us shudder, for doctors tell us that so much meat is not good for us, and that the lowly vegetable once scorned by the rich is full of vitamins necessary to health. Calories have changed our eating habits a lot.

Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, says that historians have overlooked the influence that hunger has had upon history. Our stories of the past deal with crowned heads and pompous potentates, with wars and movements of peoples. "It would make a fascinating tale," writes Doctor Klein, "and in some ways a far more important one in terms of recording human experience, if we undertook to learn more about a people from a study of its cookbooks."

For example, a cookbook published in the days of Columbus shows that a dinner in those days for anyone who really amounted to anything in Spanish society consisted of from 12 to 16 meat courses. No person of quality would have dared serve vegetables at his table, for in so doing he would appear to be economizing at the expense of his guests. That was before it became smart to be thrifty, and it was thought that vegetables were humble fare fit only for peasants who couldn't afford meat. Then, too, vegetables were scarce, since they grew best in tropical countries, and transportation was undeveloped. Besides they were perishable, and the refrigerator was unknown.—Indianapolis News.

These Pictures Tell You What To Do

Crush and Dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in Half a Glass of Water.

GARGLE Thoroughly—Throw Your Head Way Back, Allowing a Little to Trickle Down Your Throat.

Repeat Gargle and Do Not Rinse Mouth, Allow Gargle to Remain on Membranes of the Throat for Prolonged Effect.

Remember Only Medicine Helps A Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes.

Results are among the most extraordinary in medical science. On doctors' advice, millions are following this way... discarding old-time "washes" and "antiseptics." For it has been found that only medicine can help a sore throat.

Simple To Do. All you do is crush and dissolve three BAYER Aspirin Tablets in half a glass of water. Gargle with it twice—as pictured above. If you have any indication of a cold—before gargling take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a full glass of water. This is to combat any signs of cold that have gone into your system. Keep on taking if cold has a "hold." For Genuine Bayer Aspirin will not harm you. Your doctor will tell you, it does not depress the heart. Get a box of 12 or a bottle of 100 at any drug store.

Reduces Infection, Eases Pain Instantly. Gargling with Bayer Aspirin will do three things: Relieve soreness at once. Allay inflammation. AND—reduce infection; which is the important thing in fighting a sore throat.

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN—to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways. Results are quick and amazing.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin Tablets for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles. Watch this when you buy.

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

I'M CRAZY ABOUT MY NEW WASHER—BUT I WISH I COULD GET MY CLOTHES WHITER. SOMETHING MUST BE WRONG.

I HAVE THE SAME KIND OF WASHER—MINE'S O.K.

YOUR CLOTHES ARE ALWAYS SO WHITE! HOW DO YOU DO IT?

I KNOW I COULDN'T DO IT WITH SUDS AS FLAT AS THESE. I USE RINSO—ITS SUDS ARE RICH AND CREAMY.

NEXT WASHDAY

IMAGINE SOAP MAKING SUCH A DIFFERENCE! I'M THROUGH IN HALF THE TIME, AND MY WASH IS WHITE AS SNOW. RINSO'S SO EASY ON THE HANDS, TOO.

So economical—TRY IT in tub, washer, dishpan

YOU'LL say it's economical, too, when you see how long one big box of Rinso lasts. That's because you only have to use a little Rinso to get a lot of the thickest, liveliest suds you ever saw... in any kind of water.

Rinso is equally good in tub or washer. Dirt loosens and floats right off in its creamy, cleansing suds. You don't have to scrub or boil the wash. Rinso does a complete job—just by soaking. This saves the clothes from being scrubbed threadbare; saves your hands from getting red and washworn, too. Rinso's active suds speed up dishwashing—make all cleaning easier. Try Rinso in your tub or washer—and dishpan. Get the BIG box.

FROM THE BEGINNING

At his fur post, Sunset House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, with his headman, Omar, rescues Aurore LeBlond, daughter of Stuart's rival in the fur business, from an overturned canoe in the lake. She proves a charming companion, and Stuart is naturally attracted. Jim's superior, Andrew Christie, displeased at Stuart's trade showing, allows him, at his request, one year to "make good." Paradis bribes an Indian to ambush Jim and Omar. The attempt fails, and Jim takes the Indian to LeBlond. After hearing the story, LeBlond discharges Paradis. Jim and Aurore acknowledge their mutual love, though Aurore is returning to Winnipeg, and Jim has planned a canoe trip to make a personal appeal to the Indians, who have persistently refused to trade their furs with him. He finds that Paradis has enlisted their superstition to discourage them from trading with Stuart. Paradis' men ambush Jim and Omar again, but they are not harmed. Esau, half-breed partisan of Stuart, leaves on a mysterious journey which they hope will result in the overthrow of "Jingwak," Indian "medicine man" in the pay of Paradis. Camping for the night, the trader and Omar roll their blankets in the shape of men sleeping beside the fire, and hide nearby. Indians attempt to knife the men supposedly in the blankets. Jim and his friend attack and kill them.

"Rabbit!" growled Omar, as the familiar thumping of the hind feet of a buck snowshoe was repeated. "What're you going to do? Hunt up old Jinaw in the morning and accuse him of this?" whispered Jim as, with rifles across knees, they settled down to their long watch for the possible appearance of others of the Paradis band. "Ah-hah! For he tell Paradis all he know about us. I close heels mout." There was no disputing the fact that the old man's knowledge of their search for Esau would be a grave menace to their safety. Yet it was unlikely that he would leave his wife to die alone while he hunted for Paradis. And to the white man who sat through the hours beside the implacable half-breed who had already pronounced sentence of death on the ingrate, it was unthinkable that the courageous old squaw should be deserted to a slow death. But in holding Omar's hand, in giving her her chance of recovery from the infection, Jim realized that he was gambling with his own life and that of his friend—forgetting what he owed the girl at the Lake of the Sand Beaches. And yet he could not bring himself to do otherwise.

At dawn, the watchers on the shore, now confident that the would-be assassins had come alone, started a search for their canoe, which they shortly found not far away, and drew up and hid in the brush. Then, leaving their own canoe, for they did not wish to be seen, they started through the timber for the tipi of Jinaw.

Squatted by a small fire, over which simmered a tea pall, they found the old Indian frying a pan of fish. At the sound of their approach, to Jim's surprise the Ojibwa hailed them with a "ho-jo" without turning his head. "How is the woman?" asked Stuart in Ojibwa.

The deep lines of the old Indian's face softened, as he rose and faced the hostile eyes of the white man and the half-breed. Then a look of bewilderment shaped itself on his hawk-like features as he glanced curiously from one to the other. "Sleep has come to her," he said; "At the first light she said the pain had grown little in her arm. The medicine of the white man is strong."

Old Jinaw stared quizzically at the wrath in the black face of Omar, who stepped forward and started to speak, when the raised hand of Jim checked him.

"Heat some water," ordered Stuart. "I will wash out her hand."

Putting a pail of water on the fire, Jinaw led Jim into the tipi. His entrance was greeted from the pile of skins by a low, "Nia! nia! You have come! Your medicine is strong, for the pain has grown small."

Jim placed his hand on the wrinkled forehead. The fever had dropped. Then he took the bandage off the arm and washed the incision he had made in the hand, while the squaw, mumbling her gratitude, stoically refused to voice her pain. Sending Jinaw for more water, Jim quietly asked her: "Was it your son who stopped here the last sleep after I put medicine on your hand?"

The eyes of the old woman, sunken with hours of agony, widened at the question. There is no subterfuge here, thought Jim, as she whimpered: "My son, here, the last sleep? No, he has forgotten—he comes no more. There was no one here."

As Jinaw entered with the warm water, Stuart said: "We thought that you had sent two men to knife us in our sleep and we came here to make you pay."

"I saw it in your eyes," said the Indian, calmly meeting Jim's gaze, "but I did not know why your hearts had turned bitter. The men of Paradis found you, but your medicine was too strong?"

"They will stalk no more sleeping men," Jim closely studied the wrinkled mask of old Jinaw, but in the expression there, he found only mild surprise.

"It was, then, the moon on a wet paddle, as I thought." "You saw their canoe?" "No, after you left, I saw far on the lake, a flash. Then the moon was hid."

"We thought you had sent them to find us." Sorrowfully the Indian shook his head. "Jinaw has little to give the white trader for his good medicine, but his friendship. He gave him that the last sleep, when he touched hands. Does the trader from the House of the Sunset believe Jinaw now speaks with a single tongue?"

Rising, Jim gave the old man his hand. "I do. We shall be friends."

CHAPTER VIII

When Esau left Jim and Omar and started down the Sturgeon river on his mad mission in search of Jingwak, he traveled all the first night, watching the passing shores for the red embers of a dying fire. For, once Paradis was warned of the coming of the men from Sunset House, he would lose no time in guarding the river road over which they must pass. So the old man rode the swift current through the shadows, his eyes straining for the glow of a campfire on the foliage of the shore.

Before dawn the roar of white-water drifted to his ears, and he landed. For he would need the light to inspect the strange rapids and decide whether he could run them or would have to carry around. So Esau hid his canoe, went deep into the forest, boiled his tea over a diminutive fire masked from the river by thick timber, ate, and slept.

Later in the morning he walked downstream to the head of the rapids. Across the river was the cleared space at the end of a portage trail. The white-water was impassable; the Indians carried around it. But the veteran, who had passed his life on the wild rivers of western Kiwiedin, did not return to his canoe and drop down to the portage. Along the opposite shore he followed the rock-scarred white-water as it foamed and churned and thundered through a half-mile of clamoring chaos. Then he returned to his canoe and started downstream for the head of the portage, for not even the trained eyes of Esau Otchig who, in his youth, had run the Chutes of Death on the Winisk and the Long Sault of the Mad river, had found a way through for his canoe.

The old Indian was crossing the river a quarter-mile above the rapids, when, to his consternation, two men appeared on the portage. With a lunge of his paddle Esau swung the nose of the canoe to the opposite shore. Was it Paradis on his way up river, or traveling Ojibwas who would pay him slight attention? He had paddled but a few strokes when he saw a canoe carried from the forest and slid into the water. Leaping into the boat, the two packers started straight across the head of the rapids. They were trying to cut him off! It was Paradis!

Furiously Esau drove his paddle, angling across the current for the opposite shore, as his keen brain grappled with the situation which confronted him. He could land and take to the bush—ambush the two men in the canoe if they dared follow him up. But there were others behind them on the portage. That meant losing canoe and outfit—defeat. Without these he could not reach Jingwak. Then, at the head of the carry, a third man appeared. There was a puff of smoke, a faint explosion of a rifle above the drumming of the rapids, and a bullet whined past Esau's face.

As the two canoes swiftly approached each other, the old Ojibwa made his decision. Life meant little to him, now. There was one chance in ten of his coming through; but he would make the great gamble for that one chance—for Jim and the memory of Jim's dead father. The trail to Jingwak led through the half-mile of white fury ahead.

He stopped paddling, reached for his rifle, and fired at the bowman in the boat cutting across his course.

Hit, the paddler slumped back into the canoe. Close to the suck of the first drop, the sternman seized his pole and fought to check the drifting canoe, as a second shot passed over Esau's head.

Then, at the head of the portage, the old man saw another canoe leaving the beach, as again an Indian fired at him from the shore.

"Ah-hah!" he cried, his furrowed face glowing with the exaltation of his mad purpose. "So you catch old Esau? Wal, come on! Catch heem!"

Esau sighted his rifle and fired at the sternman battling with his pole to free the canoe from the fierce suction on the lip of the flume.

Splintered by the bullet, the bending pole snapped in the Ojibwa's hands. He lunged head first into the racing current, and, followed by his yawing canoe, was swept into the rapids.

Shifting his load forward to make the canoe bow-heavy, Esau rose with his setting pole. As his boat slid toward the dip of the long chute, the old man waved his hand at the pursuing canoe and the men on shore as his cry of defiance, "Come and get me!" was drowned in the drum-beat of the rapids.

No rifle shots followed the doomed figure standing with setting pole in the stern of the birch-bark, as it leaped forward. In awe the men of Paradis watched the mad canoeist deliberately steer his craft into the maw of death.

Down into the maelstrom of broken water plunged the canoe, guided by the spruce pole of the gallant old Ojibwa in the stern. Following the black water channels past boulders mounded with foam, and knife-edged rocks thrusting through the spume, checking with his pole when the way was blind, then on, grazing calamity by a paddle's breadth as he rode the roaring reaches, went the dauntless old voyageur. Drenched with spray, his leaking canoe scarred with wounds from a hundred rocks, he fought his way until, suddenly, the river widened into an unbroken barrier of white-water. With a groan, Esau read his doom written in the buried boulders which barred his path. He had made the fight, taken the long chance for Jim, and now it was over! But Esau Otchig would go down fighting!

Into the chaos of foaming boulders dropped the canoe, "snubbed" by the bending pole. The bottom grounded on a rock, was lifted off by the pole; the boat was caught and swung into another by baffling cross-currents; but still the old man fought—unconquered in the face of certain disaster. At last, the unleashed river caught the shattered canoe, like a straw, and dropped it on a huge boulder, over which the water mounded. Pivoting on the rock, the canoe rolled and started to fill. It was the end!

With a desperate leap Esau was in the water, his feet braced on the submerged rock. A heave, and he freed the rapidly filling boat, swung her with the current, and fell gasping on his knees inside, clutching his pole. Shortly he was clear of the shallows.

Then on down, through the riot of plunging river, the bent figure in the stern steered his boat, the glitter of victory in his black eyes. He had hung, for a space, on the lip of death. But he had won.

Then his heart sank as he saw a canoe below him. Desperate, he took his rifle from where it lay at his feet in the water, and boldly drifted down on the waiting canoe.

As he neared the craft, the faces of the occupants watched him with awe. "Are you a Manitou, a spirit," gasped an Ojibwa, "that you pass alive through the Rapids of the Windigo?"

Esau put down his gun. "I am a great shaman in the land where the sun goes to sleep. I fear no rapids." Here was an opportunity to impress the Indians of the Sturgeon country, and the keen-witted old man swiftly made the most of it.

"The spirits are your friends, for the Windigo allows no man to pass his rapids."

Esau gravely nodded. "Enh-eh, yes, the spirits are my friends." The Indian exchanged frightened looks with the awed squaw who cowered in his canoe.

"Jingwak, the shaman, fears to pass these rapids in his canoe. Your medicine is stronger than his."

A look of contempt crystallized on the face of the old man. "Jingwak is a wabeno, who deceives the Ojibwas to get their fur for the trader Paradis. The spirits do not know him."

"You go to the Lake of the Sturgeon?"

"Yes. Tell the people there that you saw the shaman from the land of the setting sun, who comes to talk to them, pass unhurt from the Rapids of the Windigo. I have traveled many sleeps to find Jingwak, the false shaman who speaks with a double tongue to the Ojibwas, and drive him from the country." With a sweep of his paddle, Esau left the spellbound hunter and his squaw, and continued down the river. Going ashore behind the first bend, he rested, then carried the canoe into the thick "bush," built a fire to dry his outfit, and with pitch and spruce roots started the necessary repairs.

As he worked over the rock-scarred craft, the wrinkled face of the old man lit with smiles of satisfaction. He had beaten Paradis and lived through white-water that no canoe had passed, to start on its way the story of his charmed life and miraculous powers, which would travel swiftly from tipi to tipi up and down the lake. For a time he would hide while his mysterious appearance swayed the talk around the supper fires. For he knew his people. Then he would strike.

For three days Jim and Omar camped near Jinaw while the infection in the arm of the old squaw rapidly cleared under Stuart's care. Then when she could travel, the grateful Indian started down the great lake to endeavor to learn the fate of Esau. Two nights later, the canoe from Sunset House waited at the rendezvous the Rattlesnake had set in a deep cove near the foot of the lake.

Restless from days of doubt and forced inaction, in which the absent Esau might have so sorely needed their aid, Jim and Omar sat beside their hidden canoe.

"Dere ees Jinaw," announced Omar, as a black shadow slid in toward the shore.

"Esau is here, on the lake," began the old man, who spoke no English. "I have talked to the hunters at many camps. A strange story has passed down the lake. Seven sleeps ago an Indian and his woman saw a canoe pass out of the Rapids of the Windigo. In it was a great shaman who told them his name was Otchig and he sought the sorcerer, Jingwak."

"He ran those rapids!" Jim peered triumphantly into Omar's startled face.

"By gar!" grunted the surprised half-breed. "How he do dat?"

"No canoe has ever before passed the Rapids of the Windigo," added Jinaw. "The woman who saw it says the boat had wings, and never rode the water."

JESUS AND THE SABBATH

Mark 2:23-3:6. GOLDEN TEXT—The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath; therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath. Mark 2:27, 28.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Keeping God's Day.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Keeping God's Day, INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Use Sunday.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Lord's Day.

I. Jesus Eating With Publicans and Sinners (2:13-17).

1. The call of Levi (v. 14). Levi was a tax gatherer under the Roman government. As Jesus passed by he commanded him to leave his business and follow him.

2. Jesus dining in Levi's house (v. 15). It seems that when Levi found the Saviour, he invited many of his business associates to eat with him. This gave a fine opportunity for Jesus to come into touch with some of these sinners.

3. The perplexed scribes and Pharisees (v. 16). They asked, "How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?" The question carried with it the charge that Christ was having fellowship with sinning men.

4. Jesus' reply (v. 17). "They that are whole have no need of the physician: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." The veiled charge of moral carelessness on the part of the Lord could not be denied if Jesus was a mere man. Jesus recognized the moral condition of his associates and declared that he had come as the divine Physician to heal their spiritual maladies. Surely no physician could cure sick folk without coming into contact with them.

II. Jesus and Fasting (2:18-22).

1. The question asked (v. 18). They asked why Christ's disciples did not fast. This objection suggests a lack of seriousness of purpose on the part of the disciples. The fast indicated solemnity and seriousness of purpose. John the Baptist was now in prison, therefore his disciples would naturally mourn and fast for him.

2. Christ's answer (vv. 19-20). "Can the children of the bride chamber fast while the bridegroom is with them?" The joy of Christ's disciples in present congenial companionship prevented their fasting. He declared, however, that the time would come when they would fast.

3. New wine in old bottles (vv. 21, 22). He proceeded to illustrate this by figures of cloth and wine skin. The Lord's purpose was to show the folly of imposing old customs on the new age.

III. Jesus and the Sabbath (2:23-3:6).

1. The disciples plucking ears of corn on the Sabbath (vv. 23-28).

a. Charge made against the disciples (vv. 23, 24). That they had violated the Sabbath law. For this act the Pharisees accused them of lawlessness. The Pharisees had glossed over the Sabbath law with so many regulations that it became a burden.

b. Jesus defends them (vv. 25-28).

(1) He cites a precedent (vv. 25, 26). David, the great king of Israel, had gone into the house of God and eaten the bread which should be eaten only by the priests. The higher law of human need warranted David's breaking the law in this case.

(2) He shows the nature of the Sabbath law (v. 27). The Sabbath was made for man, therefore its right use is to be determined by the good of man.

(3) Jesus is the Lord of the Sabbath (v. 28). It was Jesus who instituted it when creation was finished. Therefore, he had a right to use it as it pleased him for man's good.

2. Jesus healing a man's withered hand on the Sabbath (3:1-6).

a. The place (v. 1). It was in the synagogue, the place of worship.

b. The Pharisees watching (v. 2). The motive which actuated their watching was an evil one.

c. The man an example (v. 3). Jesus wanted the case to be open to all, so he commanded the man to stand forth where all could see him.

d. The question asked (v. 4). "Is it lawful to do good on the Sabbath days, or to do evil, to save life or to kill?" He plainly showed them that to fail to do good, to show works of mercy, to save life, is to be guilty of wrongdoing, even of murder.

e. The man healed (v. 5). Christ healed him by speaking the word.

f. The result (vv. 4, 6). The Pharisees were silenced. They sought how they might put him to death.

The Spirit's Power

If ever we rise again to conscious life, it will be by no native power, but by the operation of the Spirit of God; and, unless the Spirit dwell in us, superstition may have an idol, conscience a law, philosophy a name, but the heart has no God.—F. H. Hedge.

In His Name

I will strengthen them in the Lord; and they shall walk up and down in his name, saith the Lord.—Zech. 10:12.

WORKING TO CAPACITY

William James once advanced the theory that few human beings ever work up to their fullest capacity. Vast energy resources are hidden by the habit of fatigue obstacles which we never break through. It is possible that we possess not only a second wind but a third and a fourth. "In exceptional cases we may find, beyond the very extremity of fatigue distress, amounts of ease and power that we never dreamed ourselves to own, sources of strength habitually not taxed at all because habitually we never push through the obstruction, never pass those early critical points," James says.

English Monetary Unit Adopted From Romans

The English monetary unit, the pound, was originally a pound weight of silver, and corresponded to the Roman libra (Latin pound weight), from which is derived the "£" designating this denomination. This pound was soon known as the Pound Tower because the chief mint of the country was established in the tower, and by it the weight of English coins was regulated. It contained 5,400 grains and was divided into 12 ounces of 20 pennyweights each. The Pound Troy superseded the Pound Tower in 1527, and contained 5,760 grains.

Mixed Up

Eight-year-old Betty was having her first large party. She had been carefully coached as to the proper way to greet her guests and concerning her response to their farewells.

Heaving a sigh of relief, Betty closed the door after the last guest and sighed: "I never thought they'd go home so fast that I'd get my 'thank you's' and 'glad to see you's' so terrible mixed up."

weight of silver, corresponded to Roman solidus, and the penny, which represented the 240th part of a pound, corresponded to the Roman denarius. Hence we have the abbreviations £, s, and d.

The Roman system of computation was adopted by all European countries after they had accepted Roman Christianity. In England it was adopted by Ethelbert of Kent at the beginning of the Seventh century.

Far-Eastern Civilizations

The civilization of China goes much farther back than that of Japan. As a matter of fact, Chinese civilization was introduced into Japan about the First century A. D. In modern times, however, Japan has outstripped China in many respects, Japan having adopted western standards of living to a much greater degree. While Japan has shown a capacity equal to that of any other known people and, while their manners and customs and certain institutions were modified in ancient times by Chinese culture, they have kept pace with European and American civilization.

Rock Island to Be World's Fair Exhibitor in Chicago

Eighty-one years development of the Rock Island Lines and territory, condensed into a startling presentation of only a few minutes duration, continuously repeated, will constitute the theme of the exhibit of that railroad in the Travel and Transport Building of the Century of Progress Centennial, opening in Chicago June 1, next. Dignity, beauty and simplicity will form the decorative scheme. Announcement of the Rock Island's plan is made by L. M. Allen, Vice-President and Passenger Traffic Manager of that railroad, under whose direction the exhibit will be carried out.

Among the features will be a 17 foot "Map that Talks" showing fourteen Middle Western "Rock Island States", depicting the various industrial and agricultural products of the territory and the service rendered by the railroad, the space also embodying a sound motion picture, in natural colors, of the Golden State Limited routes. The animated map will be accentuated by a monumental mural by Artist Edgar Miller, reflecting the influence of the railroad on the progress of the territory it serves. This map will bring out in an unusual manner, the growth of the Rock Island Lines by decades, and the resultant progress of the states as the railroad expanded its service. Many of the localities in these states will be shown in a novel way.

Supplementing the general theme will be a motion picture at either end of the 100-foot exhibit space, illustrating some of the interesting activities of the railroad with which the general public does not come in direct contact, but which form an important part of railway service.

The color treatment of the exhibit will be in harmony with the most scientific methods of lighting and decorating, and the entire exhibit area effectively ventilated. The aisle

CONOCO SCORES TRIUMPH IN NEW TYPE GASOLINE

New Volatile Fluid Perfected by Research Laboratory Marks Advance in Motor Fuel Standards

SPLIT-SECOND STARTING AND SPURT PICK-UP ARE STRESSED

Bronze Color in Pump Will Guide and Protect Buyers—Offers Long Mileage and Improved Anti-knock

Conoco refining chemists have produced a new, improved motor fuel. No matter how different it is, we must call it g-a-s-o-l-i-n-e; for that is the name the public knows for every motor fuel. But this gasoline deserves a special name; one that suggests how "different" it is. How else may the public know?

Conoco (—?) Gasoline! If you can give us the name we want, $5,000 in cash is yours. $5,000 more will be divided among those who suggest the best slogans to describe it. What we seek is to make motorists "understand."

To describe the "difference" you must know the difference. To know the difference you must feel it in your motor. The man at the Conoco station will tell you the exciting facts; give you, free, an official contest-information-and-entry blank. Prepare yourself to produce the winning words. Fill your tank with this gas. Within 10 blocks, you'll know why your words may be worth $10,000.00 to us.

CONTEST RULES:

- Names must be not more than 12 letters; slogans not more than 12 words. Submit either or both on single sheet; plain white paper; one side only; but preferably on official contest information-and-entry blank, free at Conoco dealers and stations. Elaborate presentations receive no extra credit.
- Contest closes midnight, February 23, 1933. Entries must be postmarked before that date and hour.
- Continental employees, members of their families and others connected directly or indirectly cannot compete.
- Should more than one person submit exactly the same name or slogan, each will receive full amount of any prize such entry may win. All entries become Continental Oil Co. property, and none will be returned.
- The Company reserves prior rights to phrases and slogans of its own creation, already in prepared advertising. Also it reserves the names "Continental" or "Conoco" gasoline, "Conogas", and "101" gasoline. Whether or not the winning contest name is adopted, prize money will be paid; but the Company reserves the right to use a name of its own creation if decided more suitable and more protectable under trade-mark laws.
- No purchase is required of contestants. Continental Oil Co. executives will be the judges and their decisions final. Winners will be announced over radio, and prize money paid as soon as possible after contest closes.

Saturday, Jan. 28th

Commencing at 12:30 P. M., Sharp

30 GOOD HORSES

All well broken and weigh from 1300 to 1600 pounds. From 4 to 8 years old.

JOHN DIEDRICH

A Good Combination

THIS is the season for sauerkraut. For many people it's never out of season. They "love it in December just as they did in May," to paraphrase an old song. But the prize combination for this sort of weather is sizzling hot high class frankfurters, fresh from the can, and a good big heap of sauerkraut. It looks good, and it smells good, and it tastes good, and it's easy to prepare. You can't ask for a better combination than that.

Nothing to Blush About

There's nothing to blush about in having a taste for sauerkraut, as any good Teutonic citizen will tell you, but if you prefer Vienna sausages to frankfurters, here's a way to combine the two with blushing apples that is a little more elaborate:

Sauerkraut, Sausages and Blushing Apples: Heat the contents of a one-pound can of sauerkraut, and pile in center of a large hot platter. Heat the contents of a 9-ounce can of Vienna sausages, and arrange on top. Around the edges place six small apples (about one and a half pounds). The way to make the blushing apples is to core and pare them, and cook them in a syrup made by boiling one cup sugar, one and one-half cups water and a few red cinnamon candies together. Turn the apples around often so they cook and color evenly on all sides. Let cook tender, but not so long that they lose their shape. This serves six.*

Mrs. Arthur Benson was taken to the Silver Cross hospital, Joliet, Wednesday for medical treatment.

Mrs. Arthur Florence of Washington, D. C., has been visiting with her mother Mrs. Shevlin and her brother Henry and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Durringer of Roseland, Wm. Houchin and Miss L. A. Justus of Chicago were dinner guests in the Wm. Semmler home Sunday.

Mrs. Henry Zahn, wife of the late Henry Zahn a former Mokena resident, died in Chicago Tuesday. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the home of her son Charles in Forest Park. Burial was in Woodlawn cemetery. Mr. Zahn died several weeks ago. He was a son of the former John Zahn of Mokena. He was well known to the older residents of the town.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Schoeneck was taken to the Silver Cross hospital the forepart of the week. The infant is suffering with an infected ear. Dr. W. V. Hedges of Frankfort is in charge of the case.

Mr. and Mrs. George Barnes entertained a group of relatives in their home in Joliet Sunday in honor of Mrs. Arthur Florence who is visiting here.

Mrs. Will Lowe is ill at her home. She is under the care of Dr. W. V. Hedges.

POULTRY-RAISERS—
Want more eggs?

✓ THIS NEW WATER WARMER HELPS
GET MAXIMUM EGG PRODUCTION

only $2.50 complete

Keeping the poultry house lighted in the early morning and evening during winter months gives hens a long, active day. They eat more feed, drink more water—and lay more eggs.

But hens can't drink frozen water. The benefits of night lighting are lost unless a means of warming their drinking water is provided. We recommend this electric warmer just introduced by the General Electric Company. It is particularly inexpensive and trouble-free. Note these features:

1. It is made of flexible rubber so it can be used in almost any pan without fitting or clamping.
2. A long 10-foot rubber cord plugs it into any electric outlet.
3. It keeps water free of ice crust in containers up to 12-quart capacity.
4. It will not burn out even if the water runs low.
5. It has been carefully tested in the Public Service Company's testing laboratory. Quality is guaranteed.
6. It costs only $2.50 complete, and uses very little current.

FOR A FREE DEMONSTRATION of this electric water warmer, write or phone your nearest Public Service office. One of our representatives familiar with poultry raising problems will call on you and show you how this warmer works. You won't be putting yourself under any obligation. (Other General Electric dealers also carry this equipment.)

ARIZONA BROADCAST

Scenes and events dating back almost 400 years into American antiquity, as far back in fact as Coronado's march through Arizona in quest of the fabulous Seven Golden Cities of Cibola, will be presented in the regular weekly Continental Oil Company broadcast Wednesday night, February 1, over 23 N. B. C. stations.

Following a general description of the beauty and richness of present day Arizona, Carveth Wells, famous globetrotter, presents some interesting historical facts by means of a fake interview with the ghost of Coronado. The spectre of the Spanish explorer comes jingling into the scene astride his favorite mule. The ensuing dialogue is both realistic and illuminating.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station WMAQ Wednesday night at 9.30 o'clock.

Golf Clubs In Chicago Area Not Hit By Depression

"Golf Clubs in the Chicago area are feeling the depression far less than are clubs in other parts of the country," states Mr. John McGregor, president of the National Association of Greenkeepers of America, who will meet at the Hotel Sherman January 31 to February 3rd for their annual convention and Golf Show.

"Analyzing this statement, the World's Fair is probably largely responsible for this situation. Members of golf clubs in the vicinity of Chicago realize that it will be necessary for them to entertain out-of-town guests who will visit the city during the World's Fair this summer, and this fact has undoubtedly kept hundreds of them from giving up their memberships. So, while in other parts of the country golf clubs are closing like the banks, Chicago clubs will not remain open only, but should enjoy a prosperous season."

FRESHER THAN FRESH

NONSENSE, you say? There isn't any such thing as being "fresher than fresh." But there is! The explanation lies in the lack of real freshness in most city market vegetables. So time honored and real is this lack that a large metropolitan newspaper recently printed this illuminating "household hint":

To Freshen Vegetables—When you know your "fresh" vegetables are stale, let them stand in cold water for several hours before peeling or cutting them. This, in part, replaces the moisture they have lost and makes the fiber tender again.

"In part!" Very much "in part!" we should say! Think of getting your vitamins and nutritive qualities out of the cold water faucet! It takes a fasting Gandhi to do that!

On the Other Hand

Did you ever wish for a well-cultivated vegetable garden right outside your kitchen door? Peas and corn, tomatoes and beans, and everything good that grows?

The reason you delight in the thought of that kitchen garden is that your vegetables, gathered in the morning and brought right straight to your kitchen table, and immediately cooked, have that wonderful fresh-from-the-garden flavor. Ripened in the fresh air and sunlight, and not a particle of their natural moisture lost, these are truly fresh vegetables that do not need to be immersed in water to be "in part" restored to tenderness.

A Wish Come True

Well, you can have just such a garden right in your own pantry all winter long, and you won't have to grub out weeds, either; you only have to supply your pantry with quality canned vegetables; then open the cans and use the contents as you need them.

All their delicious freshness and natural flavor is saved for you by the process of commercial canning. The modern cannery is built close to the fields where the vegetables grow. Hence within a few hours after gathering the vegetables are in the cannery's kitchen, inspected, washed, prepared, put in cans and cooked.

It is all done so quickly that the vegetables don't have time to wither and grow stale. Every bit of their freshness and flavor is locked up in the can, preserved unchanged until the can is opened, and awaiting your convenience, no matter how long you keep it.

No Exposure to Air

Now if your garden was a thousand miles away, as it must be for most people during the winter months, you would have your vegetables gathered before they were fully ripened, and they would be hauled that thousand miles by truck or refrigerator car, and every hour during the three to seven days in transit your vegetables would lose a little more of their natural moisture, and they would reach you withered, stale, with their original flavor and most of their vitamin content lost; no longer would they be fresh vegetables. And that is the sort of market vegetables to which the "household note" quoted above refers.

Lots of people think that canned vegetables are cooked in one large vessel and then put in cans and sealed. On the contrary, the vegetables, after washing and preliminary scalding or "blanching," are put in cans, sealed, and then the sealed cans are put in large steam retorts and cooked. Therefore, the contents of your can of peas were individually cooked in the can, sealed so that the contents were not exposed to the air during cooking.

Vitamins Are Preserved

And here is another advantage of commercial canning over home cooking. There are different kinds of vitamins in different kinds of vegetables, and each kind has its particular work to do. These vitamins are easily lost when vegetables are cooked in open vessels, exposed to the air. When, however, the cooking is done in the little tin cans, hermetically sealed, excluding the air completely, almost none of the vitamins are lost.

For this reason many doctors now recognize that canned vegetables are actually more health-giving than so-called fresh vegetables, because they were cooked when absolutely fresh from the fields, and in their cooking they retain more of their valuable contents than when cooked on your kitchen range.

Hot Towel Unknown to Chinese Street Barber

One of the coldest jobs in Shanghai is that of the itinerant boy barbers who hang out their poles at any street corner and minister to their clients on the spot. The only point of dissension lies in the possibility that the client is colder than the barber. Icy cold water rubbed into the beard and the pate, the rude scraping of an old-fashioned Chinese razor—something like an inverted chisel—while the thermometer stands at freezing point and wind and sleet whistle around the client's ears, must be an unpleasant experience.

Still, most of these boys, who earn a very meager living, treat their clients to the semblance of a nice, clean towel or sheet around the neck, which is an improvement on the days when water was never used at all.—North China Herald.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food.

It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

Cough, Weak, Lost Flesh

Grand Rapids, Mich.—"My daughter seemed to be growing too fast. She developed a bad cough and it was necessary to keep her home from school as she became very weak and lost flesh," said Mrs. Thos. Walton of 843 Ionia St. "We owe the good health she is now enjoying to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It not only stopped the cough but also increased her appetite and built good solid flesh so that she has no more trouble."

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery can be procured at any drug store.

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Harvard Acquires the Earliest Dinosaur

THIS mounted specimen of Plateosaurus, the earliest of dinosaurs, has just been acquired by the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard university. Discovered in Germany, it is the first mounted specimen to be obtained by any museum in the United States. The Plateosaurus is estimated to be 160,000,000 years old, and is regarded as the "ancestor" of Tyrannosaurus and other giant dinosaurs of later periods.

KIDDIES' EVENING STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE FOOLISH QUARREL

GREED doesn't pay. It never does.

And yet some people never seem to learn this. Just take the case of Happy Jack Squirrel and his cousin, Chatterer the Red Squirrel. In the Green Forest were ever so many hickory trees, and there were more nuts than Happy Jack and Chatterer could eat in a lifetime. But both were so greedy that here they were quarreling over the nuts which the Merry Little Breezes had shaken down from the top of a tall chestnut tree.

Happy Jack claimed all those brown nuts were his because he had happened to be right under that particular tree when the Merry Little Breezes shook them down. Chatterer had been near enough to hear them as they rattled down and had come running over to get a share. At once Happy Jack had tried to drive him away. Chatterer had refused to go. In fact, at the sight of all those nuts on the ground Chatterer had at once decided that he would have all of them. You see he was quite as greedy as Happy Jack. Those brown nuts didn't really belong to either of them, and wouldn't until they had been picked up and hidden away. But Happy Jack and Chatterer didn't stop to think of this. Each was so greedy that he wasn't willing to let the other have a single one.

"Thief!" shouted Happy Jack. "Robber!" cried Chatterer. "No such thing! They're all mine because I found them first," sputtered Happy Jack.

"Pig, pig, pig!" shouted Chatterer, thrusting out his tongue at Happy Jack.

Do you wonder that the Merry Little Breezes, who had thought to help Happy Jack and Chatterer, looked down in dismay and stopped shaking down the brown nuts? Do you wonder that Sammy Jay, hearing those sharp angry voices, came stealing silently up to see what such a dreadful quarrel was about? You can depend on it that Sammy will be somewhere about when anything like that is going on.

At first Happy Jack and Chatterer were content to scold and call each other bad names. Then as they grew angrier and angrier they began to fight, each trying to drive the other away. Happy Jack, as you know, is a great deal bigger than Chatterer, but Chatterer is quicker and more nimble, and his teeth are quite as sharp as Happy Jack's. So it wasn't as uneven a fight as you might think. They forgot the brown nuts lying there among the leaves on the ground.

Then as They Grew Angrier and Angrier, They Began to Fight.

They forgot everything but their anger. They chased each other around the trees and up in the trees, all the time losing their tempers more and more.

Now their little cousin, Striped Chipmunk, wasn't far away, and of course he heard that dreadful quarrel. He picked up his ears. Then he stole softly over to see what it was all about. Happy Jack and Chatterer didn't see him. They didn't see anything or anybody but each other. Striped Chipmunk watched them for a few minutes. Then he spied the brown nuts which the Merry Little Breezes had shaken down. His bright eyes sparkled. He chuckled.

"I suspect," said he, "that these are what they are quarreling about. How silly. How very foolish. These nuts belong to anyone who can get them. They are as much mine as theirs."

Without wasting another minute Striped Chipmunk stuffed the pockets in his cheeks with those brown nuts until he couldn't get another one in. Then away he scurried. Pretty soon he was back again. He paid no attention to his quarreling cousins, but stuffed his pockets again and was off to his secret storehouse.

Back and forth he scurried, working with might and main. He knew that once Happy Jack and Chatterer stopped quarreling and discovered him they would drive him away, and he would have to go because he was too little to fight.

Sammy Jay watched him and chuckled. The Merry Little Breezes saw him and they chuckled. But his two big cousins were still fighting and saw only each other. At last Happy Jack and Chatterer had to stop for breath. They were too tired to run and fight any longer. But still each was determined that the other shouldn't have those brown nuts. Happy Jack looked down to gloat over the treasure he had been fighting for. Then he gave a little gasp. Not a single brown nut was to be seen. Chatterer did the same thing. For a few minutes both forgot their quarrel and raced down to pull over the leaves in search of those nuts. Not one was to be found. Their foolish quarrel had been for nothing, just nothing at all.

Sunday Evening Supper

NO ONE enjoys balancing a plate on an unsteady knee while helping one's self to a dish and holding a cupful of hot liquid in the other hand. The host and hostess who think of the comfort of their guests will provide ample space for the placing of a plate and cup. The enjoyment of good food can be entirely spoiled by the too informal and careless manner of serving. A convenient spot should be provided for each guest and a minimum amount of equipment, for there are few sleight-of-hand performers who care to juggle a plate and cupful of hot coffee.

To most of us there is a real sense of relaxation and enjoyment in meeting around the fire a few congenial friends, or if in summer weather a porch or garden is equally delightful. Try to serve such food as will be easily handled without the discomfort of dripping dishes. The meat if hot should be served in such a manner as to be eaten easily, the salad compact enough to stay in shape. Accessories like pickles, olives or celery should be arranged on one plate. If cheese cannot be dispensed with put it into the stalks of tender celery, where it may be nicely handled.

If hot rolls are served, butter them—for butter and knives make another burden. For dessert ices, sponge cake, or chilled fruit and cakes of different kinds will be enjoyed.

The tea cart is one of the helpful aids in serving such a supper. Have the plates, cups, the hot dish, whatever is served in casserole, hot toast ready to serve with the hot meat dish and the tea or coffee equipment as well as the silver to be used, all on the top shelf. If the tea cart has leaves so much the better for serving. On the lower shelf place the dessert plates and serving dish or sherbet cups.

With a small table placed for the serving of each two or three guests everybody will be comfortable.

As the Sunday dinner has been a hearty one, the supper should be food tasty but not too heavy.

Champion Hen to Defend Her Honor

ANNOUNCEMENT having been made that the world's egg laying contest is to be held at Chicago's exposition this year, America's most famous hen and champion egg layer for the past two years is now in training for the event. Owned by George England of Ingleswood, Calif., the hen, known only by number as "33," holds the record of 330 eggs per year. A white leghorn, she has a score of cups to her credit and enough blue ribbons to cover the roof of her hen house. She will defend her title against hens from every state in the Union and six foreign nations.

THE GREATEST THING

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHAT is the greatest thing in life? The man of arms may say the strife.

The man of trade may say the mart—Yet who takes money to his heart Will find her faithless, and the cheers Of victory mean some one's tears.

What is the greatest thing of all? The rich may say the castle hall, The proud may say the wreath of fame—

Yet earthly glory fades the same As earthly wealth. There must be more.

Than these in life to hunger for.

What is the greatest thing we find? The wise may say the learned mind, The fool his passions and delights—Yet life some sudden question writes Fools cannot answer, nor wise Do more than wonder and surmise.

What is the greatest thing? Not these Poor things that either pain or please, To love, to feel, to smile, to grieve, Not much to know but much believe—For, books or pleasure, wealth or strife,

The greatest thing in life is life.

The Working Bride

"Teamwork" Often Results in Happy Marriage.

"What do you think of these modern marriages that have to be undertaken on the basis of the girl sticking to her job often with the strong possibility of there being the only job in the family? This has got so general now that I see in a report from the marriage license bureau of a big city that practically all of today's brides are working brides. Along with that goes a whole changed outlook on the home and marriage. One room and kitchenette will encompass all the hopes of 'home' for these young people. I think independence and self-reliance for women is good. But can you build families and family spirit and home life on such a foundation as I refer to?"

The answer is, I believe, that it has already been done. Brides holding on to their jobs did not originate with this depression. The idea has been in practice long enough so that almost any suburb can show a crop of couples of the vintage of eight or ten years ago who started out with both working, and then when John made good settled down to care for the cottage and babies.

As little Tommy says, there's nothing for nothing in this life. And the situation of the working bride is not all to the good. But in many ways it is distinctly a gain in the foundation of lasting marriage. Chiefly, to my mind, in the fact that starting with that kind of teamwork gives a girl a healthy realistic viewpoint on what today's breadwinner is up against, and when her young husband becomes able to carry the load of a family, his modest success will not shrink to the contemptible in the eyes of a wife full of illusion as to royal roads to riches and husbands who should come home from work all set to take their wives out for a good time.

Mrs. Wm. Semmler entertained at a stork shower in her home Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Marie Jacobs.

The living and dining rooms were prettily decorated in pink and yellow crepe paper streamers which radiated from the chandeliers to the corners of the rooms. A large stork stood guard, on the dining table, over a pretty decorated basket which was filled with gifts.

A number of games were played and Mrs. Ralph Hogg of Chicago and Mrs. Henry Lorenz of Blue Island were awarded the prizes who both turned them over to the honored guest.

At the close of the games, Jimmy, the three year old brother of Mrs. Jacobs, proudly carried the basket of gifts to her, who received them graciously. They were many and beautiful.

A lovely luncheon was served.

Twenty-two guests were present from Chicago, Blue Island and Mokena.

A play is under way to cut down on the number of prizes and also refreshments, served at all of the Juvenile meetings, so that the members will not be put to so much expense. We are in hopes that every thing will work out all right.

CONSTIPATION 6 YEARS, TROUBLE NOW GONE

John J. Davis had chronic constipation for six years. By using Adlerika he soon got rid of it, and feels like a new person. Adlerika is quick acting—safe, R. Hensel, Druggist; in Tinley Park by H. C. Vogt; in Frankfort by Scheer & Stellwagen.

Death of Editor Steevens of Beecher Herald Distinct Loss to Will County

The newspaper fraternity of Will County suffered a distinct loss in the sudden death of Editor D. J. Steevens of the Beecher Herald on Jan. 14th. He had been afflicted with heart trouble which brought death to him very suddenly.

Editor Steevens was born at La Crosse, Wisconsin, May 17, 1871.

Always interested in the art of printing he had already at an early age, showed all the marks of the fine printer he later turned out to be. His first venture in this profession was at Arcadia, Wis., where he made a name for himself as a capable editor.

May 5, 1895 he was united in marriage with Miss Margaret Gleason of Arcadia. This union was blessed with seven children, of whom five, four boys and one girl died in infancy. The surviving children, who together with the mother, deeply mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate husband and father, are Charles and Mae, Mrs. Walter Newquist.

Twenty-five years ago last August Mr. Steevens located in Beecher. Here he found the opportunity to prove his ability and worth in his chosen profession, making the Beecher Herald one of the cleanest and best edited weekly papers far and wide.

His many friends in and out of the newspaper profession in Will County deeply regret the passing of Editor Steevens.
